Sumter opens its heart to injured girl

Sumter area residents have opened their hearts to a 7-year-old girl who is suffering from severe burns to her foot, allegedly as the result of child abuse.

The injured child, along with her

9-year-old brother, was brought to Sumter on April 19 by a woman who said she is their grandmother, according to Sumter County Sheriff's Office Public Information Officer Ken Bell. She reportedly took the girl to KershawHealth Medical Center in Camden for treatment for the burn on April 21.

In addition to the burns, which authorities think resulted from immersion in scalding water, staff at the hospital reported the child also had bruises and other marks on her body consistent with child abuse.

Both children were taken into protective custody, and the girl has been treated at Palmetto Children's Hospital in Columbia for her injuries. The girl was initially listed in guarded condition, Bell said, and doctors were concerned the foot may have to be amputated because of the severity of the burns and the amount of time they went without treatment, Bell said doctors had to wait for the girl's condition to improve before she underwent surgery.

After surgery and a skin graft, the girl's condition was upgraded to stable, Bell said.

"She still has a long road to recovery ahead, but doctors seem to be a little more hopeful that the child's foot might be saved," he said.

The girl's plight has prompted numerous people in the area to send gifts

USC Sumter: Fire Ants on the march

Logan-Owens encourages graduates to work hard

More than 90 University of South Carolina Sumter graduates turned their tassels and started a new chapter in their lives during the 2016 commencement exercises in the school's Nettles Auditorium on Wednesday morning.

The graduates were greeted by USC Sumter Dean Michael Sonntag and USC Columbia President Harry Pastides, who both congratulated the group on joining thousands of other graduates in the Fire Ant community and Gamecock nation.

Graduates later received a commencement address from L. Michelle Logan-Owens, chief operating officer of Palmetto Health Tuomey, who told the group that goals can be accomplished through perseverance and hard work.

"If you're going to do something, you should do it well and with honor so you will be glad to put your name on it, she said.

Logan-Owens said being successful is sometimes not an easy task, but failure should not be a deterrent.

"Failing is a part of life," she said. "If success was easy, everyone would do it."

She told the graduates to not let their own fears or discouragement from others keep them from going after their goals.

Logan-Owens said some people will try to hold your failures against you, but who you were in the past is not who you will be tomorrow. Be as enthusiastic about your goals tomorrow as you are today, she said.

Your vocabulary should include "I can" and "no excuse," she said.

Just because others have not been successful does not mean you will not succeed, Logan-Owens said.

S.C. National Guard unit going to Guantanamo Bay

COLUMBIA (AP) — Military police from the South Carolina Army National Guard have been ordered to prepare for a possible deployment to Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba as early as this fall, a Guard official said Tuesday.

About 100 members of the 131st Military Police Co. in Beaufort have been told to prepare for a potential deployment in the new fiscal year, which begins in October, said National Guard spokeswoman Col. Cindi King.

"The unit is currently scheduled to be on orders just under a year," King said. But she said she could not specify any deployment date for security reasons. She also cautioned it would not be unusual if the order is modified or rescinded before the scheduled deployment.

"Things can change," she said.

"We have often had units that were scheduled for deployment that were ramped down."

King said the unit has specialized training to meet the requirements of such a mission.

She said the unit was informed of the assignment to Guantanamo by the National Guard Bureau in October 2015.

It would be the first time a South Carolina National Guard force has been sent to support the group known as Joint Task Force Guantanamo, which is in charge of the U.S. military prison holding about 80 suspected terrorists.

King said the 131st is one of three military police units in the state National Guard.

King said the Beaufort military police unit was first organized in 2010, and this would be the first deployment for the soldiers as a unit.
